Bart C. Sullivan has more than 27 years of experience successfully defending clients against toxic tort, product liability, and other high-profile civil lawsuits. He has acquired in-depth knowledge of a variety of industries, particularly those involving pharmaceutical, medical, environmental, and automotive companies and their insurers.

Bart's trial acumen has led to defense verdicts, court dismissals, and positive settlements of numerous cases aimed at holding clients liable for such serious allegations as wrongful death, catastrophic injuries, and environmental disputes. In addition, he is skilled at handling business cases that range from employment claims to multi-million dollar transactions.

Bart is "AV"-rated by Martindale-Hubbell, which also named him a "Top Rated Lawyer in Energy and Environmental Law" in 2014 and 2015.

Defends Clients in High-Stakes Matters

The following are examples of clients he has represented:

- Pharmaceutical and medical product manufacturers
- Petrochemical companies in property damage, personal injury, and environmental clean-up claims
- Insurers and reinsurers in coverage disputes
- Class-action and multiple defendants in automotive, medical products, and environmental cases
- International defendants in automotive and all-terrain vehicle litigation

He has successfully tried cases to verdict in Missouri, Illinois, and Kentucky, handled matters in five other states, and argued before state and federal appeals courts throughout the Midwest.

Bart has served as chair of the Planning and Zoning Commission of Town and Country, Missouri, and as a member of the Dean's Council of the Saint Louis University School of Law. He holds a black belt in judo and is treasurer of Missouri Judo, Inc., the statewide organization for the sport.
